BIARRITZ

Biarritz is the only surf town in the world with a royal history. In 1854, Empress Eugénie convinced her husband, Emperor Napoleon III, to visit the area.

They bought land and built a palace on the beach, which made Biarritz one of the hottest resort towns in Europe.

Empress Eugenie invited foreign royalty to stay with their entourages and courtiers; Queen Victoria of Britain, came regularly over a period of 30 years, as well as sundry Spanish, Swedish, Dutch, German, & Russian nobility.

Edward V11, a big fan of France, managed Great Britain & the British Empire from Biarritz during his annual visits to the region.

The Russians built their own magnificent Orthodox Church next to the Palace.

Prince William and Kate visited Biarritz in 2016 with their two young children and stayed at the Palace/Hotel du Palais.

Film screenwriter Peter Viertel brought the first surfboard to Biarritz in 1956, when he came to shoot location shots for The Sun Also Rises.

Biarritz, considered the birthplace of European surfing, is a combination of French high culture and SoCal surf culture, putting a decidedly surfy spin on the notion of joie de vivre

Biarritz remains the heart of the European surfing scene, attracting surfers from all over the world.
